Graphic Design Portfolio

With a background in sports communication and hands-on experience in brand identity, print, and digital design, I bring both strategic thinking and visual creativity to every project. From corporate identity and print to social media and photography, my work reflects a passion for visual storytelling across different formats and contexts.

This portfolio presents a selection of graphic design projects from my professional experience at the football club TSV 1860 Munich and at the creative agency Hanki Film as well as from my studies at the University of Augsburg.

From concept to print: Redesign of the club magazine

During my time at TSV 1860 Munich, one key project was the redesign of the club's corporate identity. As part of this, I initiated and led the creation of two new magazines: one highlighting the club family, including staff, players, partners, and sponsors, and one dedicated to home matchdays.

I was not only involved in developing the concept, but took the lead in producing the first conceptualisation and design. Working closely with our design agency to refine the visual direction, I then managed the entire production process, making the final layout decisions and curating the content for each page.

From concept to print: Redesign of the matchday program

The redesign included also a new concept and layout for the matchday program. Balancing the interests of the club, its supporters, and sponsors, I developed the idea of a free print version for home games alongside a digital version making the same content accessible to fans unable to attend in person.

The print version was designed as a foldable A6-flyer that opens into an A3-poster. The front featured match information, team and opponent details, and a player interview. The back revealed a poster of that player completed with his signature, a collectible for fans.

As with the club magazine, I developed the initial concept and design, collaborated with our agency for the final refinements, and managed the complete production process for every matchday.

Social media presence: Concept and design

My primary role at the club was managing all social media channels, mainly Instagram, Facebook, YouTube, and TikTok, covering everything from content production and distribution to performance evaluation and post design.

One of my first initiatives was the previously mentioned redesign of the club's corporate identity, which extended beyond the magazines to the entire external communication such as the social media presence. Based on my initial designs, we worked with our agency to define a set of visual elements that would give all posts a consistent look and feel fitting the new identity. From there, I translated these into posts and reusable templates which I continuously refined and applied throughout my time at the club. The following pages present selected examples.

Social media presence: Concept and design

I organised and executed photo shoots for the new jersey launches, and prepared the material for distribution on social media. This included arranging and editing the photos applying AI tools to adapt and extend the images to match my intended visual concept.

Hanki Film

Social media design

As part of my role, I created Instagram and Facebook content that showcased Hanki Film's work while balancing storytelling with promotional intent to grow their online presence.

Creative process

The agency's founder required photos as backgrounds for every post rather than standalone graphics. Since I wasn't involved in every project, I worked with images provided by the respective teams.

When no suitable photo was available, I turned to AI tools to either enhance existing photos or generate new visuals, as seen in the New Year's Eve and Christmas examples.

Style guide for a design agency

As part of my studies, I developed a complete brand identity for a fictional design agency, presented in a style guide covering logo, typography, and colour scheme.

The brand name Werk 21 combines the German word Werk, an uncommon but evocative term for a factory, associated with craftsmanship, with 21, representing the 21st century. Together, the name stands for the intersection of tangible creation and modernity.

The design follows a modern brutalist aesthetic, kept deliberately minimal to let the colour scheme do the work. A triadic contrast with orange as the dominant colour creates a bold, recognisable visual language which is fresh and edgy without sacrificing clarity. Typography was chosen to reinforce the modern direction while maintaining strong readability.

Style guide for an Italian restaurant

In another project, I developed a style guide for an Italian restaurant. The logo was provided in advance, with one brief: present the restaurant in a modern yet authentic way.

I interpreted this through a restrained design that creates space for authentic photography and graphic details to take centre stage. A carefully chosen colour palette conveys freshness, trustworthiness, and health, working both individually and in combination, with the option of a gradient for additional visual variety.

The headline font references Roman letterforms while omitting the serifs, striking a balance between historical reference and a clean, modern feel.

Flyer design for a football club

For this project, I designed a flyer for a football club with a single brief: incorporate the club's blue jersey colour.

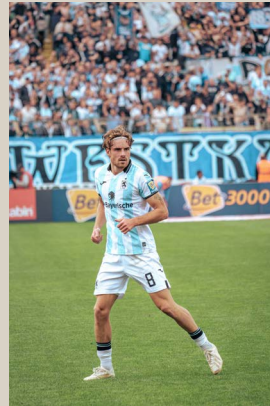

I developed a modern design built around a complementary colour contrast to create visual impact, paired with bold and distinctive typography. Hexagonal shapes reference the classic panels of a football, grounding the design in the context of the sport.

Photography

Beyond graphic design, photography is another creative outlet that shapes the way I think about composition, light, and visual storytelling.

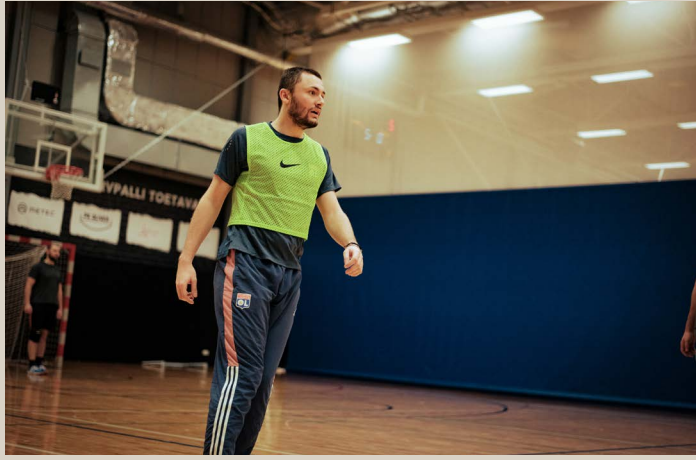

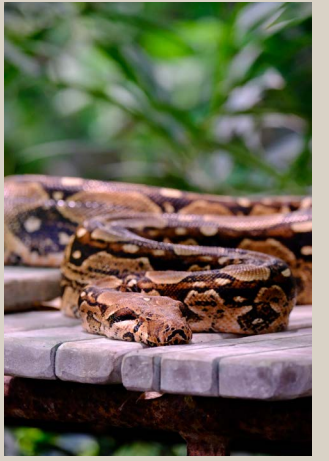

Since a young age, I have been capturing images across different settings and environments, mainly sports, landscapes, and architecture.
